POETRY.

THE WRECK.

The storm is loosed and tracks her way—that lone and laden ship,
Like a wraith and meagre band-dog from his iron leash let slip.
The steersman at the stubborn helm exerts his utmost might,
But the snow-dance slanteth to his brow, and dims his eager sight.
She driveth on as an eagle would when the lightning follow
And plungeth down till her decks are charged up to the very brim;
And her ports deck in the foaming brine, a dark and maddening stream.
With a gurgling sound, and the moan of one who dreams a fearful dream.

Midnight is at her revel wild, that veiled mysterious one—
She has gathered the stars into her lap, and lendeth unto none.
The wonted light that lately grew upon her silver air,
When the moon drew from her orient shell the life that lingered there.

There are lantern lights astern within that lonely ship I wist,
And they flicker through the spray afar, like faint-fires in a mist;
And on the deck flapping sails a fitful glare they throw,
That mocks the dance of a demon throng, on the wild waves below.

She hurries on, with maddened march of some disordered
king,
The ermine of whose regal robes about the breezes fling,
When the tread of traitors followeth him with wild avenging wrath.
And with lifted brands and muttered oaths they dog his desperate path.

Hark! to the crashing of her masts, the spar, and helm, and sail.
Are borne away in the whirlwind swirl of that relentless gale.
And from her broad and ribbed side each struggling plank is left.
Till there is not a shed of her bravery on the dark wild ocean
left.

INFLUENCE OF IMAGINATION IN CREATING AND CURING DISEASE.

The effects produced, by the workings of the imagination, on men and brute animals, are extraordinary and incontrovertible. The following facts, out of hundreds that might be cited, are supported by the most authentic evidence.

A lady having refused alms to a beggar, the latter in revenge, declared that she would die in six months.
At the expiration of that interval approached, fear had so powerful an effect on the lady's mind, that it brought on an illness, which terminated her life.

By the same working of the mind, may be explained the singular deaths of Pope Clement and Philippe le Bel, who were summoned, the one in forty days, and the other in a year, to the Tribunal of Heaven, by the Grand Master of the Templars.

Persons who have been bitten by dogs, which they supposed were suffering from hydrophobia, have imagined themselves to be threatened, or even attacked, by the disease. A very singular fact of this kind is recorded in a memorial published by the Royal Society of Science, at Montpellier, 1730. Two brothers were bitten by a mad dog. One of them almost immediately departed for Holland, and did not return until ten years after. On learning that his brother had died of hydrophobia, he was himself taken ill, and died of madness, produced by apprehension.

The following cases are even more extraordinary:— A French peasant dreamed that he had been bitten by a large black dog. He could not show any mark of the bite; and his wife, who was awakened by his cries, assured him that the dogs were well fastened, and that no dog could have entered their cottage. But all her deavors to remove the impression from the man's mind, were unavailing. The idea of the black dog was ever present in his imagination, and he thought he saw him incessantly. He lost his rest and his appetite, and became gloomy and low-spirited. The wife, who had been perfectly rational at the commencement of her husband's delusion, and who had made every effort to banish it from his mind, at length began to persuade herself that it was not unfounded, and that, as she was sleeping by his side when the dog bit him, it was very possible that she had likewise been bitten. This mental delusion developed itself in her by the same symptoms which had manifested themselves in her husband, viz—depression of spirits, lassitude, fear, and restlessness. The doctor finding that all the usual resources of medicine proved, in this case, ineffectual, advised them to make a pilgrimage to St. Hubert. From that moment the two patients became more tranquil. They went to St. Hubert, were subjected to the usual treatment, and returned home perfectly cured. A dream, and a very absurd dream, had made these ravages on the health of two persons previously strong and healthy. But dreams frequently produce very powerful impressions.

It is recorded, that a young lady, in Livonia dreamed that she had been tossed by a mad bull; and she died next day from the effect of the alarm.

Tissot relates that a peasant, having dreamed that a serpent had coiled round his arm, suddenly awoke in a fright. This arm was ever afterwards afflicted by a convulsive motion, which returned several times in a day, and was often so violent that no effort could stop it.

The dream of the celebrated composer, Tartini, is well known. He retired to bed with a store of musical ideas floating in his mind. In his sleep, he fancied that Satan appeared before him, and played a sonata. At his conclusion, the Devil said—"Tartini, canst thou play this?" Enchanted with the delicious music he had heard in his dream, Tartini arose, flew to his piano, and produced his finest composition, which is known by the title of the Devil's Sonata.

This, indeed, was the imagination of an artist. But what can be thought of the case of a young lady, who was taken ill, and died in the course of an hour, in consequence of fancying herself dishonoured by a kiss, snatched from her by a young gentleman to whom she was betrothed? One can understand more easily, and pity more readily, the case that is recorded of a soldier, who, when suffering from the maladie du pays, died,
the very day on which his conge was refused.

Though it cannot be doubted that the imagination, by sudden and violent shocks, frequently causes serious disorders, and even death, yet the same cause may operate to allay the feeling of pain, and effect the cure of diseases, especially those of a nervous kind. By this agency may be explained the miracles wrought by Prince Hohenlohe and Madame Saint Anour. When they saw to those who had faith in them: "Tear off your bandages, throw aside your crutches, for you are cured,"—it is perfectly possible that the credulous, whose imaginations were powerfully worked upon, experienced momentary relief. One powerful impression obliterates another; and hence the power attributed to cabalistic words, talismans, magic, witchcraft, &c.

There are minds so feebly organized as to be overcome by the effect of example;—thus epilepsy, convulsions, and madness, have sometimes seemed to be infectious. In 1780, during the administering of the sacrament, at a church in Paris, a young lady was seized with a convulsive fit, which had so powerful an effect on the rest of the females present, that, in less than half an hour, fifty or sixty were taken ill in the same way. Boerhaave arrested the progress of what was termed an imitative epilepsy, in the orphan hospital, at Haarlem, by threatening to burn alive all who were seized with the fits; and to give greater force to his menace, he had a large fire kindled in the court-yard of the hospital. He was aware that the surest way of removing a powerful impression, on a disordered imagination, was to counteract it by one still more strong.

The wonderful cures effected by Mesmerism are well known. In 1784, Bailli, Franklin, Leroy, and Lavoisier, who were commissioned to investigate this pretended science, and give their opinion upon it, thus expressed themselves in their report:—

"The first thing which struck the commissioners was the extraordinary nature of the effects exhibited by magnetism, and the apparent insufficiency of the means by which they were produced. The effects were violent, protracted, and multiplied convulsions; and the causes, mere touches, signs, and figures. Some great power was evidently brought into action by these means, however feeble they might be. We inquired by what secret springs these wonderful effects were produced; and what were the reasons which caused them to be attributed to an unknown fluid—which caused them to be attributed to the human frame, and which belonged to it?

Pursuing our investigation as physicians, we endeavored to discover the presence of this fluid; but without success. We are informed that its action on animate bodies is the only proof that can be adduced to its existence. The imagination, therefore, appears to be its principle. It remains to be ascertained whether these effects can be produced by the power of the imagination alone. We have tried the experiment and have fully succeeded. To render the experiment complete, we have made the convulsion cease by the same charm which produced it—viz, the power of the imagination."

Animal magnetism has how many partisans, especially in France and in Prussia; but the existence of the agent has never yet been satisfactorily proved; therefore, it may be presumed that the effects which appear to be produced by magnetic influence, are almost all attributable to the imagination. The ancient reputation of witches and magicians attests the facility with which ignorance receives any impressions that may be presented to it. The examples offered by past ages are numberless; and, even in our more enlightened times, they are not wanting.—London paper.

SATURDAY, MAY 9, 1835.

The result of the recent elections in Virginia is one of those "signs of the times," which are honestly and justly considered as of great importance. The high and commanding character of the Old Dominion—the reputation for general intelligence and sound democratic principles, which is universally conceded to her inhabitants, and the influence she consequently exercises in other States, combine to invest her political character with more importance than it could justly claim from the numerical strength of her Congressional delegation or Presidential votes. In the present election every nerve was strained to induce her to repudiate the present administration, and if not directly to join the opposition, at least to advance its interests by declaring for one who is to fight its battles under a pseudo democratic flag. The question before the people was made by the opposition to assume all the Protean shapes to be found in the federal Mythology, so that no section of the State should be without its peculiar inducement to abandon its ancient and honored principles. In the result, the patriot will find cause for joy—the demagogue for grief—the one that the cause of his country has triumphed, the other that his plans for personal promotion have failed.

It is difficult to say where the opposition will now look for approbation and support. If they turn to Massachusetts and "thank God that she is true to whig principles," their conscience tells them that even here their gratitude precedes its cause, and that they are by no means sure that even Massachusetts will not at the next election join herself to the democratic States—and if they turn from that consideration to their prospects in the approaching Presidential election, it is but changing a canopy of clouds for the darkness of utter obscurity.

Queries for the consideration of people of common sense.—1. Is it true, as many bigots believe, that the moral and patriotic virtues are confined within certain geographical boundaries?

2. Is it probable that any one party in politics, possesses all the decency, all the honesty, all the talent and all the patriotism—any more than that any one religious sect possesses all the truth and all the purity of motive?

3. Is it not probable, that the party and the sect that make the greatest pretensions to the possession of all the nobler attributes of humanity, are the most deficient in these qualities?

4. Is it true that slavery exists only among those who are nominally and legally bondsmen—and are there not very many who boast sincerely of their freedom, while they wear the collar of a priest or a demagogue around their necks?

5. Are there not very many who sincerely commiserate the Southern slaves, who are themselves hard masters and grinders of the poor?

6. Are those individuals who are loudest in claiming for the Southern slave the privileges of freedom, the most noted for their kindness and benevolence towards their own hired servants?

7. Are not the people of any State, generally more zealous in reforming the abuses of neighboring States, than in reforming their own abuses?

8. Why do mankind in general consider it an insult upon themselves to doubt the infallibility of their fathers and ancestors?

9. Is there not a class of men, pretending to be reformers, who would effect only a retrograde reformation, and turn men back again into the path of their old prejudices, by preaching up the wisdom of their ancestors?

10. Is it not an easier and surer method of acquiring applause, to seek it by defending errors than by reforming them?

It may be seen by the foreign journals, that England is industriously engaged in the work of political reform. There is no backsliding in her march of improvement. She goes steadily onward, while the balance of interests prevents the occurrence of a revolution. Her steps are sure, if they are not rapid—urged forward by the genius of liberty, and checked by the jealousy of established power, while she is guided by the wisdom of the most intelligent people upon the face of Europe.

William W. Thompson, of Northampton, and James W. Crooks, of Springfield, have been elected members of the Baltimore Convention for Hampden County.

George Savary, of Bradford, and Eliphalet Case, of Lowell, have been elected delegates to the same body from Middlesex County.

At the City Election in Albany, on Tuesday, the Democrats carried the Fourth Ward by one hundred and seven majority! "As goes the Fourth Ward, so goes the State."

The Mercantile Journal says "it is possible that Mr Kendall may make an excellent Postmaster General"—this is just what causes so much alarm among the Whigs at his appointment. They dread the popularity which his upright and able administration of the Department will secure to him.

A gentleman had his wallet stolen from his pocket while leaving the Tremont Theatre, on Thursday evening. It contained about $25, and several papers of no value except to the owner. The gentleman's address will be found on examining the contents of the wallet, and he requests us to inform the thief that he is welcome to the money, if he will return the papers. We certainly advise him to accept the offer.

The Brig Impulse, Capt. Dunbar, arrived at this port yesterday, from Venice—in the American vessel that ever arrived here from that port.

The Hon. Louis McLane has been unanimously elected, by the new Board of Directors, President of the Morris Canal and Banking Company, and has accepted.

A violent tornado passed over Liberty and Bryan County, (Geo.) on the 29th ult., levelling trees, negro houses, &c.

The dwelling house of Mr George Brewer, of Middletown, (Ct.) was struck by lightning on Monday last. It was but slightly damaged.

POLICE COURT.

Benjamin French, a ragged and weather-beaten sailor, attracted the attention of the watch, by his unsuccessful attempts to navigate his staggering craft into Southack street. As he reeled two yards backward, for every step that he pitched forward, they thought it would take him till the world turned round, to get fairly under way up the channel; and they therefore hailed him to learn where he was bound, and what he was bound for. Tackling round, he replied—"I don't know where; but I want a Missy." At this moment, a lady heaving in sight, French gave chase to her; and with such an animating beacon to steer for, after a few false tacks, he soon neared her, and was about overhauling her, when she escaped into a house. He had scarcely time to regret the loss of his prize, before another lady crossed his bows; he immediately grappled her, and was about completing his capture, when he himself became a prisoner to the watch, who followed closely in his wake. Though surrounded by a superior force, he did not surrender, without showing fight, with his fists, tongue and teeth. When arraigned he was very penitent, and wept bitterly, because, during the night, which he spent in the watch-house, his vessel had sailed for Portland, carrying with her his clothes, cash, and "character," which he would otherwise have been able to offer in mitigation of sentence. Drying his eyes, wet with the tears he had wept, for his spiritual declension, with a remnant of the lining of his blue jacket, he pleaded—"I did not know what I was about; I was intoxicated; I hope you will pardon me this time; and if ever I am brought before you again, you may hang me, if you please." In the meantime, however, his sentence, instead of himself, was suspended, to give him an opportunity to return, by the first steamboat, to Portland, to join his brig.

John Humphrey, one of Uncle Sam's scape-gongs, bedight with yellow lace, and yept a marine, was called upon to answer for assaulting divers persons in Blackstone street. John pleaded not guilty, with the tone and bearing of a gallant fellow, who did not mean to be diddled out of fine and costs, without a "stern defence," and proof plain and positive, which, unfortunately for him, was at hand, there being three Charlies ready to mount the stand and swear him to atoms.

1st discharge—the witness's eye fixed point-blank on John, on the opposite elevation—"Between 8 and 9 o'clock in the evening I saw that man in Blackstone street, with his jacket off, shirt torn to ribbons, and his fists clenched, and a ring round him."

2d discharge—"He was coaxing a sailor to fight, and drew off and let him have it; the sailor wanted to get him home, and got knocked down for his kindness."

3d discharge—"He was squaring up to a number, and showing science pretty considerable."

John defended himself by replying that they had robbed him of $2.00, in an adjoining oyster room, and flogged him for raising a rumpus about it.

When the sentence of $1.00 and costs was announced to him, he looked as if they had not quite finished robbing him; but appeared to be much relieved when an individual in the garb of a gentleman—one who, probably, for purposes of deception, dresses somewhat more stylish than constables in general—volunteered to pay his fine. John's joy was short-lived, and the bright beam of gratitude that illumined his countenance, suddenly gave place to a dark cloud of despair, as his "genteel" friend took him aside, and informed him, that his commander had applied to him to arrest him for deserting from the Navy Yard five or six days ago.

Phrenology.—We think that Phrenology, though its peculiar doctrines may not be found in nature and reason, is something better than a mere idle amusement. It leads hundreds of people to investigate the philosophy of the human mind, who would not otherwise have employed their faculties upon any higher pursuit than the common details of business and pleasure. It likewise turns the minds of the studious, from the study of metaphysics—the nonsense of literature, to the study of character and morals. We think that phrenology has a tendency more than any science that has ever become popular, to philosophise and liberalize the minds of the community. It is a science that will lead to the discovery of many truths, that would not otherwise have become generally known, though its peculiar principles may be erroneous. Not that the adoption of error is ever beneficial to the human mind, but that in the pursuit of a phantom we may sometimes alight upon a hidden treasure.

The difference between a man and a horse.—The difference between a man and a horse does not consist in a man's capability and a horse's incapability of governing himself—they are both equally under the necessity of being governed—the one by reins and the other by laws. Each of them is capable of governing himself so far as to provide for his own wants and necessities—one as well as the other—but they are both, when under no restraint, bad members of society. A loose horse may take care of himself—but he pays no regard to the rights and privileges of others. He will cut up his neighbor's corn, and trample down his neighbor's children. A lawless man is, like this horse, capable of providing for himself, but he is reckless of others. He will take property that does not belong to him, and make slaves of his fellow men. The reason and moral sense of the man is not a better guide than the instinct of the horse, except he be under the restraints which are laid upon him by his fellow men.

Tuning Jewsharps.—A man advertises in a Connecticut paper, his intention of forming a class of pupils for instruction in the art of playing on the violin, and adds to his advertisement the important information that he will "tune jewsharps on the most approved Boston plan." Now we protest against this slur upon the Literary Emporium, and take this occasion to say that Jewsharps are not considered very fashionable here, and that it is very seldom they are used in Concerts or Serenades. To be sure we recollect one instance where a bachelor friend of ours was serenaded with a jewsharp and a triangle, but the insinuation that they are generally in vogue here is none the less unjust for that. If we catch the Connecticut advertiser any where within the limits of Massachusetts, we'll tune his Jewsharp with a witness. He had better go to planting bass-wood pumpkin seeds, and let Jewsharps and fiddle sticks alone.

On the night of the 6th inst. a considerable crowd gathered around the Ursuline Convent in Roxbury, entering the yards, singing obscene songs, and showing signs of rather an unfavorable character. Fearing that serious disturbances might ensue the children of the school have been dismissed from the institution, and the community are to be removed to Canada.—Briggs Bulletin.

It was voted in the Common Council, on Thursday evening, that the meeting held in Ward 3, in December last, for the choice of members of the Common Council was not legally conducted—and consequently that Messrs Simon G. Shipley, Geo. W. Smith, John Snelling, and Wm T. Spear, the members then elected, were not entitled to their seats.

When a man calls another a fool—he means that he is wanting in that faculty which creates pecuniary thrift. When a man calls another a rascal—he means that he is or has been opposed to his own interest.—When one calls another an unprincipled man—he does not mean that he is a knave or a debauchee—he means that he doubts some important articles of religious faith!

They are eating Salmon "like any thing" down at the Cumberland House, Portland. It is enough to make a man risk a storm in the M. Donoghue to get a bite.—But Major Noah beats Portland in the vegetable line—he acknowledges the receipt of cauliflowers of immense magnitude, cucumbers about 16 inches in length, asparagus large and well-flavored, and two sticks of horseradish very nearly as large as the pillars of Hercules.

The New York Post says, "Mrs Drake is, intrinsically, a much better actress than either Miss Kemble, Miss Phillips, or Miss Jarman. We have been told that Washington Irving, when he saw this lady, during his tour in the west, performing her round of parts in the theatre of Cincinnati, openly stated the opinion, that the English stage, at the present day, does not possess her equal."

A pocket book, containing about $25, was stolen from the store desk of Mr John Lilly, in this city, on Thursday, by one of three men who pretended to be in want of goods.

The Portland people boast so much about their new Hotel, the Cumberland House, that we intend to pay it a visit this summer. We don't blame them for making much of a good house, for it is one of the greatest rarities they could have.

At the last dates from Newport, the Legislature were engaged in discussing a motion made by Mr Brayton, for adding Wm. Sprague, Jr., to the committee for counting votes, &c.

Mr Clayton, the Cincinnati Aeronaut, is about to make a balloon excursion from that city to the Atlantic Ocean, if—he can.

Court Scandal.—Our venerable cotemporary, Nuncle Lang, publishes a rumor that Donna Maria, the young Queen of Portugal, is eniente.

Mr Ingham, one of the recently elected members of Congress from Connecticut, has been chosen Speaker of the House of Representatives of that State.

The United States, Liverpool packet of the 8th ult., was telegraphed in New York at 1 o'clock on Thursday.

The Hon. John Mills has entered upon the duties of his office, as District Attorney.

Miss Martineau arrived at Mobile on the 21st ult.

Highway Robbery.—About ten o'clock on Monday night, a lumber merchant named Hial Edgerton, of Coleville, Broome county, New York, was knocked down in Noble street near Third, and robbed of his pocket book, containing fourteen hundred dollars, in notes of the Schuylkill and Penn township Banks. He was found by some of the citizens, lying senseless and bleeding on the pavement, and taken to his lodgings, at the Third Street Hall, less than half a square from the place of attack. His head was very much cut by the blade of the robber, and he was so stunned and weakened as to be unable to give the alarm. Medical assistance was promptly obtained, and he was in a fair way of recovery yesterday.—Philad. Gaz.

Crowded State of the Public Schools.—The following is believed to be the number of scholars, who at present receive instruction at the Grammar schools in this city, viz: Wells' School, 450—Bowdoin School, 425—Elliott, 482—Mayhew, 420—Franklin, 592—Adams, 520—Boylston, 524—Hancock, 578! This number is every day increasing; within the last week, 83 new scholars have been admitted to the Boylston school.—Merc. Jour.

The names of the persons who were drowned in the skiff run down by the steamboat Belfast, from New Orleans, (mentioned in yesterday's Gazette,) were Casimir and William Poursine, brothers; a child three years old, and young Mr U. Landry. The persons saved were, Mrs Poursine, who was in a delicate situation, and was kept up by her dress, and four slaves.—The party were returning from church.—N. Y. Gaz.

Accidental Death.—A man named John Adams, while in the act of coming on deck from the schooner Rebecca and Abigail, for Egg Harbor, yesterday afternoon, with a loaded gun, to shoot a duck, unfortunately struck the lock against the companion way, when the gun went off, and shot him through the neck, instantly killed him.—N. Y. Times.

The Cherokees.—From the best information we can obtain, there seems but little doubt, that the treaty between the Cherokees and the United States, of which we took some notice a week or two ago, will be sanctioned by the Cherokees with but little delay.—Columbus, Geo., Enq.

Hon. John Mills has accepted the appointment of District Attorney for Massachusetts, and will enter on the duties of his office about the 10th of May. His appointment is very acceptable in Boston. The west of the State regrets to lose so valuable a citizen.—Hampshire Rep.

A Biographer of Thomas Ewing, of "solitude and desert" memory, says, Thomas in his youth read the Fool of Quality. We suppose that Thomas, by transposition, thereby imbibed so largely of the quality of a fool.

A very eminent doctor was greatly offended at being lately called in to attend a horse. "Why," said the owner of the animal, who resides in a corporate town, "I was told you lately cured a mare." (Mayor.)

"No man," said a wealthy, but weak-headed barrister, "should be admitted to the bar, who has not an independent landed property." "May I ask, sir," said Curran, "how many acres make a wiseacre?"

Mr Perry of Hudson, the young man who was so badly scalded in the steamboat explosion at Coeyman's, is, we regret to hear, dead. Three others are expected not to survive.

For the Boston Morning Post.

"Be J"—its only but of fun we had in America.—Hudson and Sheridan, (as much like Parson Adams, as twelve to a dozen,) give their last exhibition at Julien Hall, this evening. Some of the blue Erin Corers with their Rip-Jack swells, having taken a taste last Saturday evening, feel an inclination to act the glutton to night; they will probably have for their supper a buffed nob and a milled crib. AMATEUR.
